

Deferred Disposition

Deferred disposition is a process in which the judge requires the defendant to adhere to certain terms. If you choose this option you will be on probation for a period of up to 180 days depending on violation. If a defendant successfully completes those terms, the case will be dismissed. Terms may include, but are not limited to, refraining from committing certain violations during a specified time period, attending a defensive driving class, or completing a specified number of community service hours. If the defendant does not complete the terms of deferred disposition or attend educational classes, and additional fine will be imposed and a conviction entered on their driving record.
